Project Timeline

JAN 24 — DEC 26

Overview

Mondulkiri province, located in the northeastern highlands of Cambodia, is home to a significant population of indigenous groups, primarily the Bunong people. This community faces severe poverty, marked by high rates of violence, limited educational attainment, and prevalent teenage pregnancies. Our partner strives to empower the most marginalised individuals to become catalysts for positive change within their communities. The project aims to achieve two key goals: first, to enhance and sustain the household incomes of vulnerable Bunong families; and second, to equip community members with the knowledge and skills necessary to protect and support women, children, and youth.

where they improved their knowledge on self-awareness, children's rights, all forms of abuse on children, good touch bad touch, and how to seek help when violence or abuse happens in their families or in the community. 36 youth who attended the "Alcohol and Drug Abuse" training, gained valuable insights into the risks and effects of alcohol and drug use, including addiction, health impacts, and responsible decision-making.

Mr Long Ny's story

Access to safe agricultural chemicals in Mondulkiri is limited, leading to unsafe farming practices. With training and support from our partners, Mr. Long Ny, a lead farmer, now supplies appropriate fertilisers and provides farmers with guidance on their proper use. His advice has already boosted yields and reduced chemical costs. The Mondulkiri Department of Agriculture has enlisted him to advise farmers in other districts, promoting sustainable and safer farming practices across the region. This initiative demonstrates the value of empowering innovative farmers to share knowledge and contribute to improved agricultural outcomes.
